ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This project required the cooperation and participation of libraries across the State of Texas. Future agricultural historians owe a debt of gratitude to these institutions for sharing their original resources for preparation of microfilming. We thank the deans, directors and department heads of the following libraries for their assistance and cooperation:

- Texas A&M University Libraries
 - Sterling C. Evans Library and Annex
 - Cushing Memorial Library

 - West Campus Library
 - Policy Sciences & Economic Library
 - Medical Sciences Library

PROCEDURES

Dr. Robert McGeachin and Sharon Sandall created during 1996-1997 the ranked bibliography of the State and Local Literature for Texas, 1820 – 1945 in the first phase (Phase I) of the NEH funded State and Local Literature Project. This bibliography was converted to HTML format and posted on the Internet at:

<http://library.tamu.edu/wcl/agguides/agbib/index.htm>

The ranked bibliography created in Phase I was compiled after searching online library catalogs and examining print bibliographies. The resulting bibliography did not include a current location for many of the identified materials, so an early task of Phase II in 1998 included an extensive search of Texas library collections to determine the location of materials to be filmed. It was found that the majority of available items could be obtained from the library collections of Texas A&M University, the University of Texas at Austin, Center for American History, the Harry Ranson Center, the Texas State Library in Austin, and Texas Tech University in Lubbock. A relatively small number of items were located in the collections of the following institutions: The National Agricultural Library (NAL) in Beltsville, Maryland; Prairie View A&M University; Texas A&M University at Commerce; Texas Woman's University in Denton; the University of Texas at Arlington and West Texas A&M University in Canyon. However, a portion of top ranked items, especially serials, could not be located within Texas or at the National Agricultural Library in Maryland. Therefore, funds set aside for these materials were used instead to preserve the materials located in the second ranked quartile.

After being awarded the Phase II subcontract for filming the top ranked portion of Texas state and local agricultural literature, competitive written bids based on national preservation microfilming standards were solicited by the Texas A&M University Purchasing Department. Southwest Micropublishing Incorporated (SMI) of El Paso, Texas was the selected microfilming agent for the Texas materials. Dr. McGeachin consulted with James Park, President of SMI, and arrived at a working agreement concerning the quality control processes to be used, including the make-up of their in house quality control form for each reel of microfilm, the amount of allowable splicing for corrections (no more than three pairs of splices per reel), and the procedures for refilming to correct errors. Suzanne D. Gyeszly provided the primary administrative and operational direction for the microfilming phase of this project. Robin Hutchison, the Texas A&M University Libraries' Preservation Lecturer, made a site visit to the SMI facilities in El Paso to establish working procedures for shipments to and from SMI, for provision and use of targets created for each reel by Robin Hutchison and Lynn Zynda, and for correction of errors detected by quality control inspections done by the Texas A&M University Libraries. Robin Hutchison and Lynn Zynda were responsible for the daily workflow and hands-on materials processing at the Cushing Library. All microfilming was completed according to established preservation guidelines and standards. The negative film processing also included polysulfide treatment.

Three generations per reel of microfilm were finally created. The first generation silver master negative copy was sent to the National Agricultural Library for archival storage in the National Underground Storage (NUS) vault in Boyers, Pennsylvania. The second generation silver print master negative copy is stored in the Cushing Memorial Library of the Texas A&M University Libraries. The third generation vesicular positive service copy set is stored in the Sterling C. Evans Library Annex at call number S 117 U8 reel # and is available for onsite use by library patrons and library staff making photocopies requested through interlibrary loan services. When it became apparent that sufficient grant funds were available to create a second positive service copy set of the microfilms, it was added to the routine processing by SMI and the second set was sent to the National Agricultural Library for use by patrons and staff there.

Dr. Fred Heath, the Dean of the Texas A&M University Libraries, sent a letter in August of 1999 to the library Deans and/or Directors of the major libraries and institutions in Texas requesting their assistance in loaning the materials to be filmed in the preservation project. It was made clear in this solicitation that the microfilming process would be as non-destructive of the original materials as possible. All agreed to lend materials for filming by SMI except for the Texas State Library. A one-year agreement was reached that the Texas State Library would film the materials needed from their collection (18 serials and 19 monographs) at their in-house preservation microfilming facility. The Texas State Library was paid from grant funds for these microfilming services as a second microfilming agent. Suzanne D. Gyeszly, accompanied by other library workers, collected materials borrowed from the University of Texas General Libraries' Center for American History and the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin and transported them to College Station. Titles from Texas A&M University and University of Texas System Libraries were insured and mailed via UPS to College Station. Suzanne D. Gyeszly and Dan Lech hand selected and packed approximately 45 boxes from NAL. After filming was completed, Suzanne D. Gyeszly returned the materials to these institutions in person. Robin Hutchison, Lynn Zynda and student assistants from the Cushing Memorial Library at Texas A&M University did pre- and post-filming materials processing. They coordinated their efforts with a team from the Cataloging Department, including Lisa Furubotten, Carole Oplinger, and Betty Callas, who did pre-filming serials processing. All information was recorded in an Access database created by Farhan Khan. This database was used to track materials to and from the filmer and lending libraries, to prepare targets for the microfilm, and to record receipt of film. Student assistants, under the supervision of the Preservation Librarian, were hired to do the frame-by-frame quality control checking of each microfilm reel produced.

A team from the Cataloging Department of the Texas A&M University Libraries, including Mary Dabney Wilson, Head of Cataloging; Jodi Spillane, monographic cataloger; Lisa Furubotten, serials cataloger; and cataloging staff members Carole Oplinger, Brenda Rosas, Beatrice Rosas, Betty Callas, and Rose Rojas, cataloged the 678 reels of microfilm produced. Each reel was cataloged and records were created in both the OCLC cataloging database and the Texas A&M University Libraries online catalog. The team also entered the data for the spreadsheet that accompanied films sent to the National Agricultural Library. Jo Ann Williams, Head of the Binding Unit at Texas A&M University Libraries, and a student assistant began production of microfilm box labels identifying the contents of each box and reel of film. After the first set of labels was produced, label production was completed at the Cushing Memorial Library.

Due to the size of the reels and boxes of microfilm produced, only 48 boxed reels could be packed in each storage box for the National Underground Storage facility instead of 54 as initially anticipated. For shipments to and from SMI in El Paso, to NAL, and to the NUS, Texas A&M University used the United Parcel Service because of their dependability and shipment tracking capability. As an extra precaution, each generation of microfilm was sent in different boxes so that the loss of one box would not result in the loss of an entire set of film. No material shipments of any titles were lost through the duration of the project. The project was officially completed April 2001. The final reports were sent to Cornell University, NEH, and NAL by April 30, 2001.

BENEFITS AND RESULTS OF THE PROJECT

The Texas A&M University Libraries undertook this project in 1996. Upon its completion in April 2001, it was assigned OCLC number 46814151. Due to the commitment and vision of Dean Fred Heath, the Libraries agreed to participate in the USAIN Preservation Project for the agricultural literature of the United States in answer to the call for participation by the USAIN Preservation Committee. The need to gather materials from all over the state of Texas has led to cooperation and interaction between the Texas A&M University Libraries and many other libraries on this preservation project. The project was successfully completed in April of 2001 with the assistance and cooperation of twelve state institutions and the National Agricultural Library. Through this project, a working partnership was established between the preservation and archival units of the Texas A&M University Libraries and the University of Texas at Austin General Libraries. This project and other cooperative partnerships initiated will likely continue and benefit the Texas academic library community as future collaborative projects are undertaken.

The microfilming preservation project met the goal of preserving the top ranked portion of state and local agricultural literature produced in Texas during the time period of 1820 – 1945. The project succeeded in preserving a significant portion of monographic literature including the works of such notable Texas authors as J. Frank Dobie, descriptions of the cattle ranching lifestyle, the history behind legendary Texas ranches like the XIT and King Ranch, and works describing frontier and pioneer life as well as Texas history. Other monographs cover nineteenth and early twentieth century agricultural technology, rural sociology, home economics, rural electrification, agricultural economics, and a wide range of primary agricultural research.

Several hundred theses and dissertations produced at Texas institutions of higher education were filmed covering a wide spectrum of agricultural research topics.

A large number of county soil surveys that delineated the soils of the county were also filmed. These surveys furnish a rural history, list major agricultural crops and livestock produced, and describe the agricultural economics of the county. Water has also been vital to Texas agriculture, so a large number of county water well drilling logs along with other monographs describing the state's ground water resources were preserved.

A significant portion (28.5%) of the trade journals, popular agricultural magazines, and remaining unfiled serials by Texas state agencies were preserved in the serials portion of the project on a range of topics that cover the scope of Texas agriculture and rural life. The broad general trade publications included such titles as The Progressive Farmer and Holland's Magazine. Trade journals which were filmed represented the wide variety of livestock and crops produced in Texas and included the following subject matter: cattle, sheep, goats, bees & honey, cotton, rice, sugar, truck garden crops, orchard crops such as citrus fruits, peaches, pecans and dairy production.

Many of the remaining unfiled agricultural serials published by the Texas Department of Agriculture, the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, The University of Texas and the Commissioner of Agriculture were preserved. With this project and the land-grant agricultural serials preservation project of 1982-83 most of the publications of Texas agricultural agencies have been filmed through at least 1945. At some future date the segments of them from 1945 or 1983 to the point at which they converted to electronic only format will need to be filmed. A collection and preservation plan for these electronic land-grant publications needs to be initiated before any are lost to the current ephemeral and dispersed nature of state agency electronic publications.

The proceedings of prominent Texas agricultural professional organizations such as the Texas Farmer's Congress, the Texas Grange, and the Texas State Farmer's Institute were also preserved.

Microfilms Produced

At the start of the bibliographic compilation in Phase I, we identified that there were already 192 Texas monographs on agricultural topics and 49 Texas serial titles that already existed on microfilm. From our original estimate of the top quarter of the literature as being about 1331 titles in 2,490 volumes, the final totals produced by this project were 1,304 titles in 2,490 volumes on 678 reels of microfilm. Of the 678 total reels of film produced, reels number 1 thru 615 were filmed by SMI and reels number X1 thru X63 were filmed by the Texas State Library.
