From the editor . . .

This is the last issue of the Afro-Scholar for the 1983-84 academic year. This publication is fast becoming a major reference tool in the field of Afro-American Studies, and to deal with this great success, the AFRO-SCHOLAR NEWSLETTER is being transformed from a local publication of the University of Illinois to a national publication with an international advisory board. The Afro-Scholar Newsletter will remain at the University of Illinois for another year, and then it will move to another major academic location for a two-year period.

In these last four issues, we have identified 855 articles, 231 books, and 141 events in the field of Black Studies, defined broadly as the scholarly study of the Black experience. This is empirical proof that solid academic work is going on. Further, virtually no existing organization of intellectual activities other than Black Studies has the goal of synthesizing this work for theoretical and methodological continuity and discontinuity. Further, without such a foci, we will not be able to push our understanding forward and transcend the prison house of departmentalized disciplines.
