IMPORTANT NOTICE

It is the policy of the American Bar Association that an unapproved law school intending to seek provisional approval include the following language in its bulletin.

The Dean has informed himself fully as to the Standards and Rules of Procedure for Approval of Law Schools by the American Bar Association. The Administration and the Dean are determined to devote all necessary steps to present a program of legal education that will qualify for approval by the American Bar Association.

The council of the Section of Legal Education and Admission to the Bar requires that an unapproved law school intending to seek ABA approval include the following additional language in its bulletin:

The Texas Wesleyan University School of Law makes no representation to any applicant that it will be approved by the American Bar Association prior to the graduation of any matriculating student.

DISCLAIMER

The Texas Wesleyan University School of Law does not claim that by attending or graduating from the law school or by subsequently being admitted to the Bar of any state that an accepted applicant to the law school will become employed in a legal position or receive a higher average starting salary than in a position for which the applicant might otherwise be employed nor does the law school claim any particular percentage of its graduates obtain employment in legal positions.

The above disclaimer appears to be required by the provisions of H.E.W. Reg. 177.63.40 Fed. Reg. 7585 (1975).

On the advice of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University system, the following language appears in our bulletin:

Accreditation for any law school by the American Bar Association is neither achievable in the short term, nor assured in advance of protracted evaluation. Absent accreditation of the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law by the American Bar Association, students may be ineligible to take the bar examination. By state law, the school cannot be given the power to grant degrees until after an evaluation conducted by the coordinating board unless ABA accreditation is achieved.

STATEMENT OF NONDISCRIMINATION

It is the policy of the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law not to discriminate on the basis of sex, disability, race, color, religion, or national or ethnic origin in its educational programs, Admission policies, employment policies, financial aid, and other school-administered programs. This policy is enforced by federal law under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Inquiries regarding compliance with these statutes may be directed to the Dean's Office of Texas Wesleyan University School of Law.

Mission Statement of The Texas Wesleyan University School of Law

Recognizing that the practice of law is a helping profession that embraces both proficiency in the legal craft and fidelity to the highest standards of personal integrity, the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law emphasizes excellence in the basic knowledge of the law, quality in the development of the fundamental skills required of the legal advocate, and honor in professional and community responsibility. To fulfil this mission, the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law selects its students based on an admission program designed to generate a highly competent and diverse student body, employs highly qualified faculty chosen for both academic ability and practical legal skill, and offers a curriculum that prepares graduates to act as counselors and mediators, as well as litigators, and that stresses the importance of professional responsibility.

HISTORY

The Dallas/ Fort Worth School of Law opened in September, 1989, following several years study of the need for such a school. The school spent its first two years housed in the former Conference Center of the University of Dallas. In 1991 the law school relocated to the current facilities on the corporate campus of Recognition Equipment, Inc. in Irving. The merger of the Dallas/Fort Worth School of Law with Texas Wesleyan University took place on August 1, 1992. The Law School has grown to a student body of over 600, of whom about threefourths are evening division and one-fourth are day division.

COURSE OF STUDY

Doctor of Jurisprudence

The J.D. program provides a general background in law, including the fundamentals required through lock step courses comprising thirty-three hours of the course of study and advanced required courses totaling five hours, with the balance of the required hours chosen as electives. Students may emphasize a particular area of the law through their choice of electives, or may choose a diverse curriculum.

Both full-time and part-time day and night programs are offered. The normal course load is 13-16 hours for full-time and 8-12 hours for part-time. Course loads greater or less than normal must be approved by the Dean. Full-time students may not work outside the Law School in excess of twe jty hours per week.

A student must successfully complete a minimum of 88 semester hours in order to be recommended for the J.D. degree by the faculty, two-thirds of which must be in residence at Texas Wesleyan University School of Law. This work is normally accomplished in six full-time or eight part-time semesters. A cumulative grade point average of 70 is required for graduation.

Class Attendance

Regular attendance and preparation by students are required. Students should be aware that the Law School is obligated to certify to the various boards of state bar examiners that each student has been in regular attendance in classroom instruction. Each professor has the privilege of excluding a student from the course or from the final examination in the course whenever that student has accumulated an unreasonable number of absences or instances of unpreparedness.

Method of Instruction

The primary method of instruction is the case method, in which students study actual decisions of courts and administrative agencies and analyze the law and implications of such decisions. This method is Socratic in theory and fundamentally inductive. Other methods of instruction include clinical and problem based instruction. Each student is expected to actively participate in class.

Examinations

A student is required to undertake the scheduled examination in each course for which he or she is registered for credit. Once a student has received an examination, a grade will be given regardless of whether the examination is completed. Examinations are administered and graded under an anonymous examination number system. Examinations are not deferred except for good cause; deferral must be approved in advance by the instructor and the Registrar.

Grading

The Law School uses a numerical grading system for all courses. The correlation of numerical grades to accomplishment is as follows:

90-99 inclusive	Excellent
80-89 inclusive	Good
70-79 inclusive
60-69 inclusive	Below Average
55-59 inclusive	Failing

The historical median grade for all law school classes is between 73 and 77. Students who fail required courses must repeat them. Students who fail elective courses may, but are not required to repeat them. The original failing grade shall be entered and used in computing the student's cumulative grade point average. Repeated courses are entered on a student's transcript as a Pass/Fail course and do not affect the cumulative grade point average.

Scholastic Probation and Suspension

Each student must maintain a cumulative grade point average of at least 70 for all courses taken at the Law School. After two semesters in the law school, any student with a grade average below 67 shall be dismissed from the Law School for academic deficiency. After two semesters in the law school, any student whose grade average is between 67 and 70, shall be placed on academic probation. A student whose average remains below 70 after the semester in which the student was placed on academic probation shall be dismissed from the Law School for academic deficiency.

Discipline

All students must agree to be bound by the terms of the Honor Code. Texas Wesleyan University School of Law reserves the right to terminate the attendance or registered status of any student at any time or to remove from the list of candidates for a degree or otherwise discipline any student whom it may consider unworthy because of deficiency in conduct, or character not in keeping with the standards of the Law School.

Change of Requirements

The Law School faculty reserves the right to change the schedule of classes, the program of instruction, the requirements for degrees, and any other similar rules or regulations. Such changes will not be applied so as to impose substantial detriment upon students enrolled at the time of the change.

THE LAW LIBRARY

The Law Library provides access to legal information resources to faculty and students at the School of Law, to members of the bench and bar, and to the general public. It is open ninety-two hours a week, during seventy-eight of which at least one professional law librarian is on duty.

The collection of the Law Library is currently more than 120,000 volumes, including all of the core materials required for a law library under Annex B of the ABA standards. The Law Library is rapidly expanding its holdings to provide more breadth and depth for student and faculty research. In addition, interlibrary loan service is available to faculty, staff, and students for law school-related research or business. The collection is fully cataloged through an electronic Information Navigator and classified under the Library of Congress classification system. The Information Navigator is a fully relational database that can provide hypertext access to the library's collection.

A computer room provides Westlaw and LEXIS terminals and two terminals supporting CD-ROM technology. A separate computer lab is available for training in computerized legal research. The library has actively acquired sources in electronic format. In addition, students have available unlimited access to Westlaw and LEXIS for law school-related research.

The library has ample student seating, including four conference rooms which are available for group study. General seating is available both at large and small tables, as well as at carrels.

Admission

Prelegal Education

The Law School does not prescribe a specific prelegal curriculum for its applicants. However, there are certain goals that pre-law students should keep in mind when planning the college program. They should strive to acquire the ability to read, write, and speak the English language well; to gain a critical understanding of human values and institutions—political, economic, and social; and to develop in themselves the power to think both logically and creatively.

Requirements for Admission

An applicant must have received, or have completed all requirements for, a baccalaureate degree from a college or university of approved standing prior to the time he or she begins work in the Law School. In order to apply, however, a prospective student need have completed only six semesters or nine quarters of undergraduate work. An applicant must take the Law School Admission Test (LSAT), which is administered four times a year throughout the United States and in many foreign countries, and provide scores to the Law School. Finally, a completed application form including two letters of recommendation is required. Recommendations from former professors are most helpful.

An applicant's record must be of sufficiently high quality to demonstrate that he or she is qualified for the study of law. In evaluating a student's record, considerable weight is given to undergraduate grades and the score achieved on the LSAT. In addition, however, strong consideration is given to other factors such as the applicant's statement of purpose, work experience during and after college, cultural background, extracurricular activities, graduate studies, and service in the military, Peace Corps, or Vista. Such factors should be fully set forth in the personal statement of the applicant. Interviews are not normally a part of the admission process.

The Law School may deny admission to any applicant who, in the judgement of the faculty, may appear to be unfit in character to engage in the study or practice of law.

Affirmative Action in Admissions

The faculty and administration of the Law School recognize the need for increasing the number of minority group members in the legal profession and that a diverse student body provides a depth and breadth of background which enhances the educational process. The school encourages applications from students from all backgrounds. The Law School has designated a minority student liason, and applicants are encouraged to contact the liason through the admission office.

The Association of American Law Schools (AALS) and the Council on Legal Education Opportunity (CLEO) sponsor programs designed to increase the number of minority law students. Those interested in information on these programs should write to CLEO, 1800 M Street N.W., Suite 160, South Lobby, Washington, DC 20036.

Admission Procedures

All inquiries and correspondence concerning admission should be addressed to:

Texas Wesleyan University School of Law Office of Admission 2535 East Grauwyler Irving, Texas 75061

Prior to consideration of an application, the Law School must receive:

A completed application, including a $50 non-refundable application fee

An LSDAS report Two letters of recommendation The applicant's personal statement

Admission decisions are made by evaluating the application materials on the basis of criteria intended to discern the applicant's likelihood of success in law school. Applicants may contact the Law School about questions and may supplement their applications as the need arises.

Transcripts

The applicant should request that each post-secondary educational institution attended send an official transcript directly to the Law School Admission Services. Since the time required by various institutions to comply with such a request may vary greatly, the applicant should allow sufficient lead time for receipt by the Law School Admission Services.

If the transcript(s) furnished do not do so, upon admission the applicant must furnish to the Law School an official transcript showing final grades and receipt of an undergraduate degree.

Law School Admission Test

The applicant must take the LSAT and request that the score be reported to the Law School. The test usually is given in June, October, December, and February of each year. The test should be taken no later than six months prior to prospective entrance, and it is strongly recommended that it be taken earlier if at all possible. The number assigned to the Law School for reporting purposes is #6801. The LSAT/LSDAS Registration Packet, which contains information concerning the test, sample questions, application forms, and a list of the testing centers may be obtained by applying in person at the Law School or by writing to the Law School Admission Services, Box 2000, Newtown, PA 18940. A sample of the test, including new types of questions, a discussion of the different types of questions, an analysis of the correct answers, and information about test–taking strategies may be found in the Law School Admission bulletin. No other material is recommended by the Law School Admission Council for study preparation for the LSAT.

Transfer Students

An applicant who has completed one or more years of law study at an American Bar Association approved law school may apply for admission as a transfer student. Such an applicant must be in good standing at the school previously attended. In addition to the materials regularly required, the applicant should provide a letter stating the reason for the transfer application, request that official transcripts of law school work previously attempted be provided to Texas Wesleyan University School of Law, and furnish a letter of good standing from the Dean of the law school from which transfer is sought.

If accepted, advanced standing credit for work done at the law school previously attended may be granted. The amount of advanced standing credit which will be granted is determined on an individual basis. No credit will be granted for any course in which the applicant's grade was less than the average required for graduation at the school from which the student wishes to transfer.

At least thirty hours in residence is required to be eligible for a degree.

Visiting Students

Students in good standing at another law school may be considered for admission to the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law on a visiting basis. An application for admission must be completed and a letter must be furnished from the Dean of the law school the applicant is regularly attending stating that the applicant is in good standing and that credit for courses taken at Texas Wesleyan University School of Law will be accepted for transfer.

Credit for Courses at Other Law Schools

A student is permitted to take courses for credit at another law school only with the prior approval of the Dean of Texas Wesleyan University School of Law.

TUITION AND FEES

Amounts

Tuition charges and fees currently charged are as follows:
Tuition per semester credit hour	$300
Application Fee	50
Student Bar membership fee, per semester	10
Library fee, per semester	35
Blue Book fee, per semester	5
Parking fee, per semester
Parking Card deposit, refundable

Terms of Payment

Each applicant accepted for admission must forward a $300 non-refundable seat deposit which will be applied toward tuition and fees when the applicant registers. Tuition and fees are due and payable in full upon registration. A student is not considered to be registered unless the student has paid all tuition and fees. All balances must be paid in full before a student will be permitted to register for another semester.

Financial Aid

No federal or state financial aid is available until accreditation. The Law School, however, does provide an installment payment plan.

COURSES OFFERED

Required Courses

The required courses fall into two categories: lockstep courses and advanced required courses. The lockstep courses are those which must be taken in sequence. The advanced required courses must be taken before graduation, but the semester in which the student enrolls in the course is at the student's discretion. These courses total thirty-eight hours.

Electives

The law school offers a rich and varied upperclass curriculum. It is designed to respond to the wide diversity of students at the law school and their plans for what they will do with the degree after law school. Rather than require courses which might be crucial to the development of analytical and practical skills for some and less valuable to others, the law school offers a wide variety of both core courses and specialty courses. Students are advised of the need to balance their schedules with courses that will give them intellectual and analytical rigor with those which they perceive will meet their individual needs.

FACULTY

The profile of the Texas Wesleyan University School of Law faculty reflects a vibrant and diverse group. There is a depth of experience both in and out of the law that matches well the diversity of the student body. The twenty-one members of the law school faculty hold degrees granted by a total of over thirtyfive educational institutions. There is a wealth of varied forms of teaching and practice experience. In addition to teaching expertise, the average professor has over ten years of experience practicing law. Faculty members are available to both day and night division students in and out of class, during regular scheduled office hours and by appointment.
