

Cooking with Ground Beef

Ground beef is 100 percent beef that is ground up and packaged. It is a great source of protein, vitamin B₁₂, iron and zinc.

A serving size is 3 ounces, which is about the size of a deck of playing cards.

Uses

You can add ground beef to many recipes, including spaghetti, tacos and meat loaf. Ground beef also makes tasty hamburgers.

A 1-pound package of ground beef will make four hamburger patties.

How to store it

Keep frozen ground beef in the freezer until you are ready to use it. For best taste, use it by the “best if used by” date on the package.

How to thaw it

Thaw ground beef by placing it on a plate on the lowest shelf in the refrigerator. The plate will catch any juices that might spill on other foods.

It takes about 24 hours for frozen ground beef to thaw in the refrigerator.

Once the ground beef is thawed, use it within one day.

Note: Never leave frozen ground beef out on the counter to thaw. Even when cooked, beef that has been thawed at room temperature can make you sick.

Cooking it safely

When cooking hamburgers, make sure the inside of the patty is cooked to 160 degrees F. Use a food thermometer to measure the temperature of the patty.

For dishes that contain ground beef, cook the beef before mixing with other ingredients.

How to store cooked ground beef

Leftover food made with ground beef should be placed in the refrigerator right away to prevent it from spoiling. Use it within 3 days.

Reheat foods with ground beef until they are steaming hot, or have an inside temperature of 165 degrees F.
